Possible Novel Polymer?

Aaron J Clarke, a former student at James Cook University, Townsville.

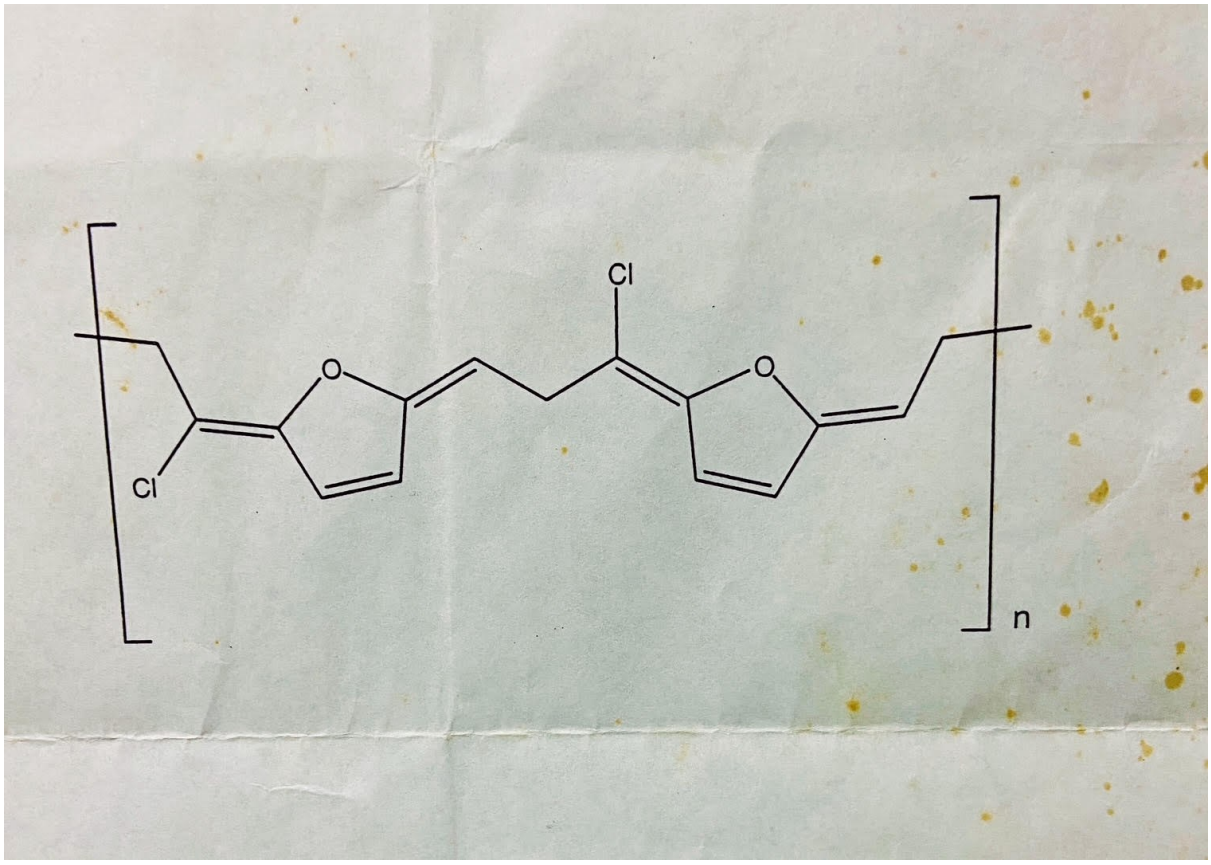
Contact email: aaron.clarke1973@hotmail.com

Disclaimer


Before transferring to English Literature, Aaron J Clarke was an undergraduate science student at JCU Townsville during the 1990s. During that time, he used a chemical model kit to construct the polymer referenced below—one that may have already been elucidated by chemists more skilled than himself. However, if this structure has not appeared in the scientific literature since its conception around 1999, it may possess theoretical properties of potential benefit. If so, I hereby make it freely available to the world, in the hope that it may inspire future research.